U.S. Patent Office Issues FlowVision Patent for Inventory Management System

Dillon, CO (PRWEB) June 28, 2012 -- FlowVision, LLC a full service provider of Lean Business and Supply Chain Consulting Services, today announced the U.S. Patent and Trade Mark Office has issued a patent to FlowVision, LLC for its approach to supply chain management. The patent entitled "Inventory Management System" again demonstrates FlowVision's commitment to be a trendsetter in the field of Lean Management Solutions.

"We take great pride in working with our customers to develop for them unique and mathematically sound approaches to supply chain management", says Dave Pytel, FlowVision Partner and co-inventor. "The inventory management system allows our customers to have exclusive access to our planning methodology that can simultaneously increase customer service levels while reducing inventory throughout the supply chain." Michael Henderson, partner of FlowVision and co-inventor adds, "We are pleased the Patent Office has recognized our distinct approach to inventory management. The system allows our customers to manage their assets; not only within their company, but also throughout distribution centers, warehouses, suppliers and the entire supply chain irrespective of inventory ownership. The statistical approach allows customers to dynamically update inventory levels as business conditions change. The system has been deployed throughout North America, Europe and Asia with remarkable results. We are please to offer this system to our customers and we look forward to continuing to be the leading innovators in supply chain management solutions."
